Students in a Ph.D. program who have completed one semester of study, have taken at least six credits in each semester, and have a conduct grade of 80 or higher may be awarded scholarships as described in Item 1, or including Item 4, Subparagraph 1 of this Article.

Students in the Master's and Ph.D. programs who do not meet the six-credit requirement during the dissertation writing period may apply with a recommendation letter from their advisor and a dissertation writing plan.

Those who do not meet the above criteria may apply on the recommendation of the department.

3. Eligibility review of stipend for current Ph.D. students:

The basic threshold for qualification review for second-year Ph.D. candidates advancing to third-year Ph.D. is four points for paper publication. The review standard may be increased by colleges based on the nature of the field.

The basic threshold for qualification review for third-year Ph.D. candidates advancing to fourth-year Ph.D. must accumulate 8 points for paper publication. The four newly added points should come from high-impact factor journals where the Ph.D. student is the first author or has joint authorship with their advisor. The review standard may be increased by colleges based on the nature of the field.

Point Calculation Principles

(1) Each publication as a first or second authorship in SCI, SSCI, A&HCI, TSSCI, or THCI will receive four points.

(2) Each Scopus journal or conference paper will receive two points.
